FORya

CREATOR PARTNERSHIPS · AUTUMN / WINTER 2026

You've got plans.

We've got the look.

An invitation to a small group of style creators to shape how FORya arrives in the world.

We're not looking for an ad. We're looking for a Tuesday.

FOR*ya* plans what you'll wear around the thing you're actually going to — a dinner, an interview, a wedding in a field in October. It reads the date, the place and the weather, looks at what's already in your wardrobe, and builds the outfit from there.

We call those Moments. Not events. Not occasions. The small, specific things that make getting dressed harder than it needs to be.

What we'd like from you is not a product demo. It's one honest piece of content about a real Moment in your own week, and what it looked like to plan for it without the usual half hour of standing in front of a wardrobe.

If that sounds like something you'd post anyway — only easier — you're exactly who this is for.

IN THREE PARTS

What the app actually does. No more than that.

01

Moments

You tell it what you're going to, where and when. It handles the dress code, the weather and the hour of day so you don't have to think about any of it.

02

Your wardrobe

Photograph things you already own and they become part of the plan. The cut-out happens on your phone — the photo isn't uploaded anywhere.

03

The look

A complete outfit, built from what you own plus anything missing. If a piece needs buying, it shows you where and what it costs. Nothing is hidden behind a limit.

Please don't describe it as a shop, a styling service or an AI stylist that buys things for you. It plans; you decide; the retailer sells. That boundary matters to us and to the ASA.

Taste, not reach. We mean it.

We're working with a deliberately small group. We'd rather have fifteen creators whose feeds we genuinely like than three hundred who post once. What we look at:

- A point of view. Your feed looks like a person, not a catalogue.
- You already get dressed on camera. Getting-ready content, outfit planning, wardrobe edits — it's a format you're fluent in.
- Comments that read like conversation. We'd take 4,000 engaged over 90,000 quiet.
- UK-based, because the catalogue, the pricing and the weather are UK right now.

What we don't ask for

A follower minimum. A posting schedule that takes over your month. Scripted lines read to camera.

Exclusivity beyond the obvious: please don't post for a directly competing styling app inside the campaign window.

And never a positive review. If you use it and it doesn't work for you, tell us and we'll pay you for your time anyway. That is a real offer.

Start with the plan, not the product.

Every piece of content we love opens the same way: a real thing in your diary, and the small panic that comes with it. The app arrives second. If the first two seconds are a logo, we've lost.

One video, a few Stories, and the raw files.

DELIVERABLE	DETAIL	DUE
Feed video	20–40 seconds, shot vertical 9:16. Posted to both TikTok and Instagram Reels. Same cut is fine; caption can differ.	`[ date ]`
Stories	Three to five frames showing you actually using it, with the link sticker on the final frame. Instagram only.	`[ date ]`
Raw footage	Unedited clips and any screen recordings, sent as a single folder. This is the part most creators forget and the part we value most.	`[ date ]`
Usage	Licence for us to run the video as a paid ad on TikTok and Meta for `[ 60 ]` days from posting, priced into the fee below.	–

One round of notes from us within 48 hours of seeing your draft. If we miss that window, post it.

Pick the one that's true for you. Or bring your own.

ANGLE 01

I've got a thing on Friday

A real plan in your diary. You open the app, answer three questions, and a complete outfit comes back. This is the core one — if in doubt, make this.

ANGLE 02

The wardrobe already knows

You photograph six things you own. The next look is built from them. Best for anyone whose audience is tired of being sold more clothes.

ANGLE 03

And then it rained

The forecast turns and the outfit changes with it. Short, funny, and the easiest one to shoot in a single take.

ANGLE 04

Planned it last night

A get-ready-with-me where the deciding already happened the evening before. Morning is just putting it on.

If you've got a better idea than all four, we'd genuinely rather have that. Send us a sentence before you shoot and we'll say yes or ask one question.

Six things that make the difference.

- Open on the problem. The first two seconds are the plan and the panic, never the app. “I’ve got a wedding in nine days and nothing that works.”
- Show the real screens. Screen-record on your actual phone. Don’t recreate the interface, don’t speed it up so fast it can’t be read.
- Natural light, real room. Your bedroom beats a studio. We are not trying to look expensive.
- Say it once. One idea per video. Two features is one too many.
- Keep the tone level. Confident and dry travels further than excited. No “OBSESSED”, no shouting, no three exclamation marks.
- End on the outfit, not the logo. Wear the look. That’s the proof.

Captions: write them the way you write everything else. We will never send you a line to read. If a phrase doesn’t sound like you, cut it — including anything in this document.

Say this. Not that.

ACCURATE	NOT TRUE, PLEASE AVOID
“It plans an outfit around what you’ve got on.”	“It buys the clothes for you.” — there’s no checkout in the app.
“It uses clothes I already own.”	“It finds the lowest price.” — it shows sellers it can see, not the whole market.
“It shows me what a missing piece costs and where to get it.”	“It knows your whole wardrobe.” — only what you’ve added.
“A Moment — a dinner, an interview, a wedding.”	“An event” or “an occasion.” — we say Moment, every time.
“The cut-out happens on my phone.”	“AI stylist.” — it plans; you choose.

This isn’t pedantry. Claims we can’t evidence are the fastest way for both of us to end up in front of the ASA.

White ground, charcoal type, one flicker of orange.

You do not have to shoot in our palette — your feed should look like your feed. But if you're adding text, a cover frame or an end card, these are ours, and we've kept them deliberately plain.

PAPER · FFFFFF

INK · 18181B

FLAME · F05A1E

PANEL · F5F5F6

Two typefaces, both free: Bricolage Grotesque for everything, and Instrument Serif Italic for one word per sentence — the turn, the emphasis, the bit with feeling in it.

One dinner. One decision.

Flame is an accent, never a background. If you're using more than one orange thing in a frame, that's one too many.

Label it as an ad. Clearly, and first.

- #ad at the very start of the caption — not after a line break, not buried in a cluster of hashtags at the bottom, not "#sp" or "gifted".
- Switch on the platform's paid partnership tool on both TikTok and Instagram, with FORya* as the business partner.
- Say it out loud or on screen in the first few seconds of the video too. The caption alone isn't enough if the video travels without it.
- Stories get it on every frame, not only the first.

Why we're strict about it

UK advertising rules apply to paid creator content, and the responsibility sits with both of us. An unlabelled post can be removed and ruled against publicly.

It also just works better. Audiences have been able to spot an undisclosed ad for years, and the ones who notice stop trusting the rest of your feed, not just this post.

This clause is in the contract. We will ask for a correction before we ask for anything else.

Paid properly, and on time.

ITEM	TERMS	AMOUNT
Content fee	For the video and the Stories, whatever the engagement turns out to be. No bonus structure, no performance clawback.	`[ £fee ]`
Usage licence	Paid social on TikTok and Meta for `[ 60 ]` days. Extended only by a new agreement and a new fee.	`[ £usage ]`
Payment terms	Half on signature, half within `[ 14 ]` days of posting. Invoice to Decusatio Ltd.	–
If it isn't for you	Use it for a week, decide it isn't your thing, tell us honestly — we pay the content fee for your time and nothing goes out.	`Full fee`

You keep the content and may keep it on your profile indefinitely. We won't ask you to delete a post if the campaign ends.

Five steps, about three weeks.

STEP 01

You say yes. We send the contract and get you early access to the app.

STEP 02

Live with it for a week. Plan something real. Tell us what's annoying — that feedback is worth as much as the post.

STEP 03

Send us your idea in a sentence. We reply within a day with yes, or one question.

STEP 04

Shoot and send a draft. One round of notes from us inside 48 hours.

STEP 05

Post to both platforms, with the paid partnership label on. Raw files over the same week.

Nothing here is designed to eat your month. From yes to posted is about three weeks, and most of that is you simply using the app in your normal life.

Campaign window: `[ dates ]`. If your schedule needs to move, say so — we would much rather shift a date than get a rushed video.

If this sounds like your thing, we'd love to hear from you.

Tell us which of the four angles you'd take, or the better idea you had instead. One paragraph is plenty.

The app

Have a look before you decide. If it doesn't move you, it won't move your audience either, and we'd both rather know now.
